

FIGURE 6.2. A comparison of three popular kernels for local smoothing. Each has been calibrated to integrate to 1. The tri-cube kernel is compact and has two continuous derivatives at the boundary of its support, while the Epanechnikov kernel has none. The Gaussian kernel is continuously differentiable, but has infinite support.